

Porter's Five Forces Model:

When looking at entering into business, this is a useful tool that you can use to determine if it's a market you feel you can compete within. It can help you keep in mind the main driving forces of business activity in any given market. The five forces are shown below.

Economies of scale, Proprietary products, Brand identity, Switching costs, Access to distribution, Government policy, Expected retaliation, Capital requirements

